Winemaking

Since the 2020 vintage, only about 300 bottles of this mythical Grand Cru have been produced. After "La Chapelle," this is the winery's second foray into the Côte de Nuits, involving more than just modest quantities. The area is covered with tree rows, gently slopes to the east, and is influenced by winds coming from the southwest, directly from the nearby Combe Grisard. It enjoys a slightly cool climate.

Our tasting note

In the glass, it shines with a bright purple hue. On the nose, the wine presents delightful aromas of red fruits. On the palate, it impresses with great finesse, concentrated and fiery notes, balanced acidity. The wine is still a bit reserved at present but will develop excellently in the coming years.

Buisson-Charles

The Buisson-Charles estate covers a modest 6.3 hectares and has been cultivating parcels in the Meursault area for several generations. Its holdings also include crus from Volnay and Pommard, while its négociant activities encompass red wines from Corton and Chambertin, as well as white wines from Chassagne-Montrachet, Puligny-Montrachet, Chablis Premier Cru, Pouilly-Fuissé Premier Cru, and Corton-Charlemagne. The estate's old vines, ranging from 30 to 90 years of age, naturally produce low yields, resulting in highly concentrated wines with excellent aging potential after vinification and maturation. Catherine Buisson and her husband Patrick Essa have been managing the estate since 2001, and they are fortunate to have their son, Louis, return to the winery after completing his studies as an oenological engineer. There's no doubt that Louis will follow in his parents' footsteps in the years to come. The 2019 vintage marked a significant milestone as it was the first one he fully vinified on his own.
